

tAngerinecAt RELEASES SPINE-CHILLING, HYPNOTIC “SOMETHING BROKE INSIDE”

"...it's full of defiance, and there's even a beguiling quality to it. Powerful, heady stuff. Be drawn into their world and keep an eye out for more from this band." - Colin Bond, God is In the TV

"tAngerinecAt marks 2021 with music at once marvellously extraordinary and memorable." - Randall Radic, XS Noize

UK-based DIY art-pop/post-punk tAngerinecAt released their new single, “Something Broke Inside,” on February 5.

“Something Broke Inside” narrates waking from a nightmare, coughing blood laced with shards of broken glass – the psychological aftermath of contaminated intimate relationships, angst, and isolation. Following on the heels of tAngerinecAt’s last album, Many Kettles, featuring “Roses from Blood,” the imminent “Something Broke Inside” is at once a sonic and artistic tour-de-force.

Made up of non-binary Eugene Purpurovsky and Paul Chilton, the two artists first got together in 2003, followed by touring the Ukraine, UK, and Russia. In 2014, they took the name tAngerinecAt, beguiling audiences with their electrifying, cathartic performances full of arresting, unparalleled fusions of sound, including hurdy-gurdy, whistles, duda, harmonica, and avant-garde layers of electronic music.

Intertwined with Eugene's deeply personal lyrics tackling themes of severe trauma, childhood abuse, poverty, gender inequality, dehumanization, stigma, persecution, and the challenges of being a migrant from a poor post-Soviet country at war. tAngerinecAt’s creations evoke the serrated edge of the task of being human.

Since then, tAngerinecAt has released four albums, toured extensively, received beaucoup airplay on BBC 2, BBC 3 and BBC 6, and performed at myriad festivals: Knockengoroch Festival, Eden Festival, Equinox Festival, Willowman Festival, Leigh Folk Festival, Festival8, Festival x-24, Fire In the Mountain, Llangollen Fringe Festival, Blue Lagoon Festival, Tanner Fest, Radnor Fringe Festival, Alice's Wicked Tea Party, Wrex Fest, Hidden Hill Festival, JudeAnt Festival, Krayina Mriy, and Trypilske Kolo, along with others.

Surging with complex visceral textures, simultaneously potently dark and despairing, "Something Broke Inside" travels on a stark rhythmic beat enhancing Eugene's piercing vocals, infusing the tune with feelings of oil-and-water, while layers of sound assemble uneasiness.
